

ABSTRACT

A method for operating an internal combustion engine having a fuel-driven combustion motor, making possible a
5 differentiation of faults in the fuel delivery system. Fuel is delivered under pressure to the combustion motor via a fuel delivery system. A pressure decay rate in the fuel delivery system is determined, and a fault is inferred as a function of 10 a comparison of the pressure decay rate with a predefined threshold value.